

Driven by Sin:

Mary Sundberg

Two hearts of unknown need
Both thrown together in this tangled web
Alone in the depths of the darkness
Crawling around blind
Tapping heart after heart
Traveling farther from one another
Losing reality
No heart either has touched is worthy
Finally, after lifetimes of searching
Wanting to jump out of their skin
Driven by sin
Scared, dazed and confused
They drive on
Both hearts and bodies fed
Tasting the lasting sweetness
Have the stars finally aligned?
They move together like flowing art
No other could put this sin asunder
Could they be creating their own fatality?
Both creatures are still urging
Wanting to jump out of their skin
Driven by sin
Lustful, yearning and selfish
They drive on