CHESAPEAKE — - Tidewater Community College received $100,000 for scholarships at the dedication of its Regional Automotive Center on Monday.

The money came from the Hampton Roads Automobile Dealers Association, one of the college's partners supporting its Automotive Technology program.

The new $10.1 million center is a 30,000 square-foot building on the Chesapeake campus that includes a showroom, nine classrooms and 15 instructional garage bays, including one that fits a tractor-trailer rig.

Technology includes video cameras that zoom in on hands-on demonstrations on during class and projects footage onto large monitors in the classrooms and bays.

The project was included in the state's 2002 bond referendum for higher education.
