340 High Street Student Art Magazine

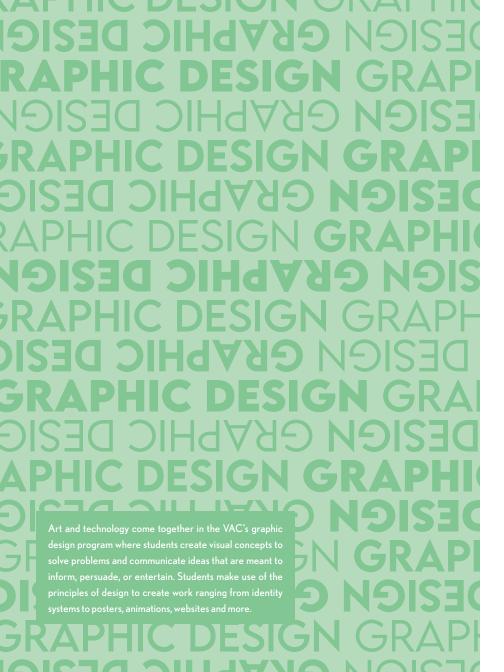

This is the 22nd edition of 340 High Street—an annual publication of exemplary Visual Arts Center student work. 2020 was a year of chaos and uncertainty—classes moved primarily online, and those that were in-person

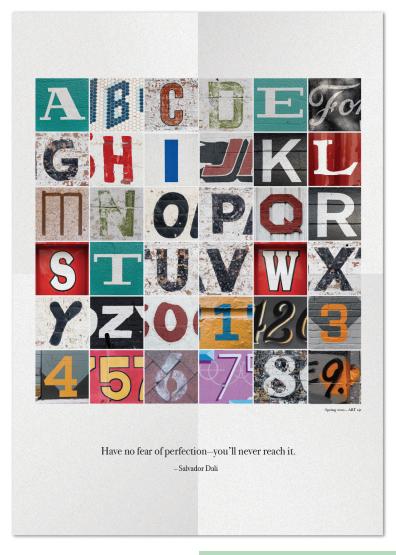

ATAOH BARHT required additional safety protocols and PPE. In spite of the challenges of social distancing, wearing masks, and the fear of the pandemic, the world remained connected through the magic of the arts. This year's magazine is a celebration of the perseverance of our fellow students who continued their craft through all of it.

This publication is designed entirely by graphic design students and, as this year's design team, we wanted to reflect on the unexpected challenges we faced and commemorate the good that remains. Our collaborative process was remote—we met weekly on Zoom to develop concepts and share ideas. Despite the obstacles faced, we were able to design this magazine and bring this celebration of student work into the world.

As this edition of 340 is published, TCC has moved all visual arts classes to temporary teaching spaces across CENTER ARTS AISNAT the Norfolk campus. Norfolk is where, eventually, a new VAC facility will be designated. We will all fondly remember the former VAC building, with its beautiful glass façade, located in historic Olde Towne Portsmouth. Virginia. This location was home to fifteen art studios, a fully-equipped lighting studio, a glassblowing facility, computer labs with the latest industry software, a library, and exhibition spaces. More than simply a location, the Visual Arts Center is a phenomenon-the resulting magic from the convergence of artists, community members, students, designers and academics as they gather together to celebrate their common passion.
